An Expectation of Perfection – The Argenio Home

“I’m at a point in my life where I want and expect perfection. I was not disappointed.”

MASTERWORK LIVED UP TO THEIR STELLAR REPUTATION AND FOLLOWED UP ON EVERY COMMITMENT THAT WAS OFFERED – BOTH DURING AND AFTER THE CONTRACT WAS EXECUTED.

There were multiple details in Joe’s vision of our remodel that I disagreed with initially, but we’re now reaping the benefit of his insisting that features be included. He took us and the architect out of the box and inserted a level of detail and grandeur that we never expected.

We gave Joe broad strokes for our vision and he worked out every detail perfectly. We were supplied with a complete plan and specification book indicating precisely what was to be supplied and where. The kitchen’s custom hood is a feature I resisted. Now that we’re using it, I can’t imagine the room without this feature. The lighting in particular was a critical component of the project and the biggest testament is that everything worked as promised and is aesthetically pleasing.

The flow of the rooms works perfectly for our needs and we receive numerous compliments on our home. ■■

Joe’s Viewpoint

It’s ALWAYS GRATIFYING WHEN A CLIENT CALLS US BACK IN FOR ADDITIONAL WORK. WE FIRST WORKED FOR THE ARGENIOS WHEN THEY ORIGINALLY BUILT THEIR HOME. TEN YEARS LATER, THEY WERE IN A DIFFERENT PLACE IN THEIR LIVES AND WE WERE CALLED BACK IN TO DO MANY OF THE THINGS THEY WERE UNABLE TO IMPLEMENT.

Once a client gets to know us and has faith that we really have their best interests at heart, they tend to open up about what they really want. Like many of our projects, the discussion began with the kitchen. But, because the client already knew and trusted us, he opened up pretty quickly to include a complete redesign of several areas.

When you start a design process, you need to look at all the components that relate. In this case, the kitchen ended up with many unique design features including a custom exhaust hood that bridges adjoining spaces and a redesigned side entry and mud room. As the project evolved, it also included a great room overlooking the pool and terrace. The end result included a cathedral ceiling with custom designed ceiling trusses, nicely coordinated windowscaping and tracery along with a graceful_____ and fireplace mantle. Definitely, one of our more grand design projects. ■■
